

FISHING FORUMS

NOTES ON FORUMS

- 1) These forums are not recommendations but only a list of online fishing forums that you can explore for yourself and participate in if you choose to. The goal is create more links and exposure to your website and fishing charter business.*
- 2) Choose forums that YOU like and that have a category that is a good fit for you. Don't sign up with the first one you see. Check them all out first before making a decision.*
- 3) Choose forums that are popular. Many forums post the number of contributors and even the number of site visitors on the forums pages.*
- 4) Choose forums that allow your fishing charter business as much exposure as possible. This can include mentioning your charter business on posts, as the post contributor and especially forums that allow you to make a link back to your website either in the post or at least on your profile listing. Remember, links to your website from popular fishing related websites are strong factors in determining your website's ranking on Google search results. Ideally, you should have regular posts over a long period, especially posts that include links back to your website.*
- 5) All of the forums below require registration before you're allowed to post, but none require fees of any kind that we were able to locate.*
- 6) Forums versus Facebook. Why are Fishing Forums still so popular? It's true, Facebook offers the ability to create Groups on specific topics whereby users can join and share information. However, the interface remains lacking in organization. Even using the search function leaves users to scroll endlessly reading every post in order to find the handful pertaining to what they're looking for. Online forums may also feel like searching for a needle in a haystack, but the segregation of information into subcategories makes it a lot easier. While a forum may be a general fishing forum, there are many subcategories, which address local fishing reports, various fishing categories from freshwater to deep sea, different locations, etc.*

<https://www.bdoutdoors.com/forums/>

NOTES

The go-to site for many anglers if there ever was one. The great thing about this site is they have a forum or section devoted to almost everywhere you can fish in North America and a few other locales around the world. They have forums dedicated to all manner of fishing—fly, gear, freshwater, saltwater—and everything is sectioned off into regions, to make narrowing down where to post a little easier.
